

Dear sirs:

I am a Vietnam era veteran and I resent the relentless attacks by the right wing idealogues who dominate the media and are constantly tearing down the reputations of fellow vets. Even Secretary McNamara has admitted that the war was "unwinnable." Why refight it? McCain, Kerry, Clealand and millions of other vets have earned the right to speak their minds and be listened to respectfully, even if their views are unwelcome to the chicken-hawks in the radical right wing. If Sinclair wants to examine this issue, they should host a forum of many differing vets to discuss the war in a more representative and ballanced way. Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest.

They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
